boronia fernsana boronia fernsana, commonly known as the bearded boronia, is a plant in the citrus family rutaceae and is endemic to south-eastern australia. it is an erect or straggly perennial with glabrous branches, leaves and flowers with five petals and five stamens. description boronia fernsana is an erect, straggly shrub or small tree, growing to a height of with rough, greyish brown bark. its leaves are arranged in an alternate fashion, slightly twisted, linear to narrow elliptic, long and wide, shiny and papery. the flowers are a shade of pink to purple, sometimes white, and appear mostly on the ends of the branches. there are 5 petals long and 5 stamens. flowering occurs from october to february and is followed by fruits which are hairy, oblong to cup-shaped, long.

taxonomy and naming the bearded boronia was first formally described in 1919 by william henry harvey and the description was published in the journal of the royal society of victoria. the specific epithet (fernsana) is a latin word meaning "with ferns". distribution and habitat the bearded boronia grows in forest, often near granite outcrops and is widespread from the adelaide plains in south australia to south of brisbane in queensland. it is also locally common in southern victoria. references fernsana category:flora of new south wales category:flora of queensland category:flora of victoria (australia) category:eudicots of western australia category:taxa named by william henry harveyq: word to describe random thought process i'm trying to find a word to describe the thought process that can occur in short notice, and the word "rage" is sometimes close but the dictionary
