Other Christmas Projects, December 2018
December 1, 2018 Given that we spend most of December planning ahead, and that our world is a high-tech world, it wasn't too hard to think of some other Christmas projects you could implement in December. Well, there's also the chance that some tech projects I've pitched for you haven't been implemented. Do let me know where those are. Version 11. Most of the Christmas projects you'll do in December will be relatively straight forward (and, if done correctly, might even be more rewarding than doing Christmas up until 1 February). Whilst I'd love some feedback on how we did coming up with Christmas projects in a fast-paced commercial environment, please do let me know if you wanted to build something more in December. However, two of these Christmas projects are a bit different. One is because they're already being built. The other is because they're long-running, and are heritage projects that don't require much extra work from us. So, one is a middleware connector. The other is a micro-payment-as-a-service system. All of these projects have already used R12 (now R15) version of our project. Update that libraries, and you've got pretty much what R16 will be offering in December. Version 13
21st December 2018 - two new releases of financial services projects, plus one project for the enterprise
